AAF: Looking Forward To A Decade Of Action

A Letter From The Chairman

As we enter the decade of the 90's, we at the Amateur Athletic Foundation (AAF) of Los Angeles are pleased with our accomplishments of the 80's. But we see this new decade as a new call to action to improve on our mission of offering every boy and girl in Southern California the chance to experience sport.

The 1984 Los Angeles Olympic Games produced a surplus, forty percent of which was entrusted to the Amateur Athletic Foundation, the non-profit organization created by the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee to invest in Southern California's youth and sports.

In the six years since the world focused its attention on Southern California, the Amateur Athletic Foundation has invested $30 million into youth sports in the communities that for two weeks during the summer of 1984 staged the most successful celebration of sport the world has ever seen.

Priorities for funds from the Amateur Athletic Foundation continue to favor those underserved segments of our population -- low-income, girls and handicapped -- with an additional emphasis placed on efficient utilization of existing community resources.

In 1990, the Amateur Athletic Foundation initiated the Sports Club program, an innovative effort to bring quality sports programs back into the communities of Southern California that are most in need.

The Coaching Program continues to be a cornerstone in the Foundation's mission of offering safe sporting opportunities to the boys and girls of Southern California.

The Paul Ziffren Sports Resource Center is now the largest sports library in North America, and continues to lead the way in research and education about issues involving sport.

We at the Amateur Athletic Foundation rejoice with you over the accomplishments of the 80's, and we look forward with anticipation and enthusiasm to the 90's, and the promise of even better sporting opportunities for our legacy -- the boys and girls of Southern California.

David L. Wolper
Chairman

AAF: Bringing The Community Together Through Sport

A Message From The President

The 1990's will bring extraordinary changes to Southern California. And the changes will profoundly affect the lives of our children. Already, the Los Angeles Unified School District is implementing year-round school. The continuing influx of new citizens to this area will test our ability to build a sense of community.

"Thank you ... If it weren't for you, I would be sitting at home ...

Now I find exercising more enjoyable. I have lots of fun.

I am improving every week."

Rei I Shigahi

The challenge we face is in providing young people with a chance to succeed, a feeling of belonging and an opportunity to give back to their own community.

Sport is uniquely suited to meet those challenges. The AAF was born of the 1984 Olympic Games, an event which demonstrated the global understanding of sport. And sport provides young people with an opportunity to experience success and to learn about teamwork and self-worth. These lessons are essential to developing citizens who can contribute and have loyalty to our community.

Through our grants and programs, we will continue to spark the creative efforts of youth sports providers. Our grants seek to strengthen existing sports organizations. The grant process, much like venture capital, requires a strong business plan and a sense of how the program will continue after support from the AAF has ended.

Our programs are designed to provide new opportunities to learn and to develop traditions in sport. The AAF Sports Club program has provided the magic of sport for the communities most in need. We have found that every community has people who will volunteer their time and efforts for young people. AAF sports clubs provide communities with the opportunity to create sport leadership and tradition.

Through the Paul Ziffren Sports Resource Center, which contains the largest sports library in North America, we are continuing our educational efforts on issues related to sport. Our conferences at the Ziffren Center generate thought and new ideas about sport and its important role in society.

The AAF has become an important institution in Southern California. We know that the volunteer spirit which made the 1984 Olympic Games a success lives on. And most important, we know that through sport, we have a powerful tool for developing common interests to unite and strengthen our community.

We look forward to meeting the challenge of the 90's.

Creating Opportunities For All Through Grants

The Amateur Athletic Foundation has invested $30 million in youth through sport in Southern California since the 1984 Olympic Games. Thousands of youngsters have been served by the Foundation in the eight counties in which the AAF operates - Imperial, Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara and Ventura.

Organizations receiving grants are typically providing on-going, structured youth sports programs, combining the essential elements of teaching, learning and competition, and have strong parental volunteer involvement. Grants have ranged from $800 to $2 million. The AAF has covered a wide range of sports, from archery to rowing, and even a sport native to Malaysia called sepak takraw, which involves two teams of three people kicking a rattan ball over a net.

But whatever the sport, AAF grants support programs that:

Emphasize the learning of sports skills through good coaching.

Expand sports experiences for girls, disabled children and other historically underserved young people.

Promote family and community support of youth sports.

Make maximum use of existing facilities.

Demonstrate the ability and commitment to be self-sufficient and enduring.

Strengthen underdeveloped Olympic sports.

Grant guidelines adopted by the AAF Board of Directors can be obtained by writing or calling the Foundation. The AAF staff participates fully in all phases of the grants process, evaluating all funding requests, working face-to-face with prospective grantees and providing guidance. Once a grant is approved by the Board, the staff monitors the progress of programs, offering assistance when needed.

From the inception of the AAF in 1985, to March 1990, nearly 300 grants have been awarded to youth sports organizations throughout Southern California, with approximately 25 percent of them still active.

"Thank you for caring about girls like me. I used to watch the boys play basketball, now I play with them and they say I'm very good."

Erin Hawkins

Programs: Expanding The Horizon Of Opportunities

In addition to providing grants to youth sports organizations, the Amateur Athletic Foundation initiates, finances and operates youth sports programs to introduce large numbers of youngsters to the magic of sport. The AAF has invested over $4,000,000 in this endeavor as it leads the way in creating innovative programs which can be duplicated across the country.

AAF SPORTS CLUBS

In 1990, the AAF initiated the Sports Club program. The goal is to bring the community together through involvement in sports. AAF-chartered Sports Clubs began at nine sites in greater Los Angeles -- Bethune Park, Bodger Park, Enterprise Park, Jordan Downs, Mar Vista Gardens, Mona Park, Southwest College, The Salvation Army, and Will Rogers Park, and are each run by an Advisory Board made up of members from the community. The Boards decide what sports they wish to make available, order the necessary equipment and uniforms, make arrangements for officials to referee the games or events, set membership fees and privileges and find volunteers who will participate in the AAF's coaching workshops so that they may become coaches. In the coming years, the AAF will continue to add new sites to the program.

BEACH VOLLEYBALL

The AAF Youth Beach Volleyball program made its debut in 1990. The program teaches inner-city boys and girls, ages 11 to 14, beach volleyball skills, and provides opportunities for competition. The program offers beach-style volleyball on sand courts at five city parks in metropolitan Los Angeles. Members of the Women's Professional Volleyball Association (WPVA) assist in the coaching and help to organize and demonstrate game situations for the youngsters. The program will expand to additional sites in the future.

AAF JUNIOR HIGH RUNNING

In December 1987 the AAF initiated an after-school running program called "Run for Fun," in conjunction with the Los Angeles Unified School District. The program has been a resounding success each of the past three years, and it culminates with a 3K Fun Run at the Memorial Coliseum for program participants. Nearly 1,000 boys and girls, ages 11 to 16, have competed in the 3K run each year, with many times that number participating in the after-school program. The purpose of "Run for Fun" is to teach youngsters how to run distances faster and how to have fun while running. Each volunteer coach at the 50 participating junior high and middle schools receives instruction through the AAF's Coaching Program. In 1989 the AAF was proud to welcome Nike, Inc. as a sponsor of the 3K run. The culminating event was chronicled on an episode of ESPN's "The Sunkist Kids."

SUMMER SWIM

In 1986, the AAF joined forces with Los Angeles city, county and YMCA pools to create SUMMER SWIM, a pilot project teaching boys and girls not only the skills but the sport of swimming and providing competition opportunities. Since 1987, the program was expanded to every city and county pool, with coaching workshops provided for every instructor. The cities of Long Beach and Santa Clarita have also joined the program. More than 75,000 boys and girls participate in the water skills program annually, and several thousand have competed in the SUMMER SWIM Festival that concludes the summer-long program.

YOUTH CYCLING

The AAF Youth Cycling Development Program had its genesis in 1986, to expose youth to the skill, excitement and lifelong benefits offered by cycling. This program has evolved to incorporate the efforts of the Southern California Cycling Federation, area bicycle clubs and shops with instruction and training at existing velodromes in Encino and San Diego, as well as the Olympic velodrome in Carson. The AAF Youth Cycling Program has led to the development of several outstanding young cyclists in Southern California.

LA '88 / YOUTH SPORT CENTERS

During the months leading up to the 1988 Olympic Games, thousands of boys and girls participated and competed in 13 Olympic sports at 38 Los Angeles-area venues as part of the AAF Sports Centers Program. Youngsters learned new skills in archery, badminton, swimming, synchronized swimming, tennis, track and field, cycling, soccer, gymnastics, team handball, fencing and rowing, free of charge, while setting and achieving new goals. Five of the sports were available to youngsters in wheelchairs.

Corporations, philanthropic institutions and individuals are invited to contact the AAF to discuss new opportunities for joint ventures.

"Thank you ... Without you, we probably wouldn't even have a team."

Stephanie Hanna

AAF Friends Of Sport

AAF Friends of Sport volunteers are an integral part of the AAF's efforts in bringing the opportunity to participate in sports to every girl and boy in Southern California.

Volunteers assist in many different ways -- acting as time keepers, event managers, working as administrators or conducting site visits. More important, they are always there to provide a friendly embrace and words of encouragement to insure that all kids enjoy a quality sports experience.

AAF Friends of Sport coordinators Dusty Chapman and Teta Grimes have been honored as outstanding volunteers in philanthropy by the National Philanthropy Organization. The honor serves to recognize the contributions of the hundreds of volunteers who are members of Friends of Sport.

Coaching Workshops - Athletes First, Winning Second

The goal of the AAF Coaching Program is to reach every youth sports coach or coach-to-be and make sure each is prepared for the important task of teaching our youth the proper fundamentals of sport. The AAF believes that quality coaching and a positive sports experience go hand-in-hand.

Through the AAF Coaching Workshops, adults get the skill they need to be good coaches. They learn the AAF philosophy that sport can be a powerful vehicle to help any child, regardless of skill level, and develop his or her potential as an athlete as well as a person. The Coaching Program is comprised of two three-hour sessions. The first session is in general sports theory, while the second focuses on sport-specific skills. The AAF has published coaching manuals for baseball, basketball, soccer, swimming, track & field and volleyball.

Recently, the AAF entered into a partnership with the Southern Section of the California Interscholastic Federation (CIF) high schools to train soccer coaches. The AAF sponsored a 30-hour pilot coaching curriculum for 300 CIF soccer coaches, which was successful and now will include all 700 schools in the Southern Section. The relationship with the CIF expanded to include track and field in 1990.

Through the Paul Ziffren Sports Resource Center, the AAF seeks to elevate the level of coaching expertise throughout Southern California. In addition to serving as a host for Coaching Workshops, the Ziffren Center offers coaches and athletes an opportunity to learn more about sports through books, photographs, film and video.

"I appreciate this opportunity you have given me to play tennis greatly.

It's been a lot of fun."

Cristina Reveles

Paul Ziffren Sports Resource Center

The Amateur Athletic Foundation's Paul Ziffren Sports Resource Center is the first and only facility of its kind in the nation. With the addition of the holdings of the National Library of Sports, (just one example of the AAF's ambitious acquisition philosophy) the Ziffren Center library's collection is now the largest in North America.

A professional library staff with expertise in sport assists visitors. A computerized public catalog is available to the athletes, coaches, academic researchers, sport journalists and others who use the facility. State-of-the-art video equipment and audio-visual viewing areas are also available.

The Ziffren library has become known nationally, as well as internationally, with reference calls coming from nearly every state and a dozen foreign countries.

The Ziffren Center is named in honor of Paul Ziffren, the chairman of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee and the first chairman of the AAF.

Highlights of the library collection include:

More than 3,000 volumes of archival Olympic publications dating back to the turn of the century, including the official reports for each of the Olympic Games from 1896 to 1988.

The Avery Brundage Collection -- a compilation of his papers and correspondence over more than 60 years contained on 149 reels of microfilm.

Current subscriptions to more than 250 periodicals covering all areas of sport.

The Los Angeles Times sports section dating back to 1930.

Over 50,000 photographs.

Annual guides in several sports.

Oral histories of 48 Southern California Olympians who competed between World War I and World War II.

An unparalleled collection of coaching videos, covering the spectrum of sports.

The Ziffren Center's multi-purpose pavilion is designed for conferences on sport, coaching workshops, screenings of sport films and videotapes, special exhibitions and meetings with youth sports organizations.

The Center has been the site of national conferences on race and gender in the sports media, the dangers of steroids, as well as several press conferences and award ceremonies. In addition, the Ziffren Center has hosted numerous field trips of school children, and participated in a "learn-to-read" program with a local school district.

Thousands of people visit the Paul Ziffren Sports Resource Center each year to learn about sport and its impact on society.
